Course delivery with respect to the COVID-19 pandemic
The intent is for this course to be delivered in-person but should the COVID-19 landscape shift, the course will be delivered on-line synchronously (i.e., on Zoom at the times indicated in the timetable) / asynchronously (e.g., posted on OWL for students to view at their convenience) [delete as necessary]. The grading scheme will not change. The course will return to an in-person mode of delivery when the University and local health authorities deem it safe to do so.

Course Description:
This course will explore the ways in which gender—largely, the social construction of masculinity and femininity—has played a role in Canadian history, and will examine some of the major historiographical debates that have surrounded this complex topic. These debates often also address the related issues of race, class, and sexuality. This course will challenge students to employ gender as an integral tool of historical analysis, and to reconsider conventional narratives in Canadian history.

Course Syllabus:
COURSE DESCRIPTION:
Women’s History, since its emergence in the late 1960s, and Masculinity History, since its birth in the 1990s, have contributed to some lively debates in Canadian History. This graduate half-course will explore the ways in which gender has played a role in selected trends and time periods, and will examine some of the major historiographical questions in the last five decades that have surrounded this complex role. These questions have often addressed the related issues of race, class, and sexuality. This investigation will challenge students to utilize gender, itself a contested concept, as an integral tool of historical analysis, and to reconsider conventional narratives in Canadian History.

COURSE REQUIREMENTS:
Research essay (18-20 pages): TBA 40%
Critiques (3, at 2 pages each): TBA 30%
Seminar presentation: TBA 15%
Participation: 15%

LEARNING OUTCOMES:

Students should be able to:

- understand the ways in which gender shaped various historical trends and movements.
- understand the ways in which gender intersects with issues of race, class, and sexuality.
- identify past and contemporary historiographical debates in Canadian gender history, and the ways that they have challenged conventional historical assumptions.

SEMINAR PRESENTATION:

You will sign up for a presentation date beginning in Week 5. On your selected date, you (possibly along with one other) will present one of the scheduled articles. In your presentation, address and critique your article’s thesis, main arguments, biases, and sources, and situate your article in the larger historiography. As well, discuss your related essay topic in the context of your reading. Stimulate class discussion by asking questions and fielding comments. Feel free to incorporate audio-visual aids. You will be graded on the content of your presentation, and on your facilitation of the seminar discussion. As you may be “sharing” your presentation date with a classmate, and in order to prevent overlap in discussion topics, arrange with them which topics/readings that each one of you will present. Your presentation will last 30-40 minutes.

To facilitate the research of your essay, the subject of your essay will coincide with the general seminar topic of your selected presentation date. Your essay (in both paper and electronic format) will be due on that same day in class. As your classmates are relying on the timely submission of your essay in order to write their critiques (see below), essays MUST be submitted on your assigned due date. Late research essays will generally not be accepted for grading. If you are facing difficulties, please talk to me.

ESSAY:

Your essay should be 18-20 pages. It must include a thesis statement that advances a clear argument and maps the discussion points of the paper. In addition to offering a meaningful examination, your essay must include an introduction, conclusion, endnotes or footnotes, and a bibliography. Endnotes/footnotes should be in a correct and consistent format. The bibliography should include 12-15 sources, 2/3 of which should be secondary sources (contemporary sources, mostly books, written by scholars) and 1/3 of which should be primary sources (written/spoken by observers during the time period under study). Primary sources can be books, articles, government documents, newspapers, etc., but they must be a stand-alone source/document, not simply an excerpt or quotation retrieved from a secondary source; in other words, you must locate your own primary sources (on the internet (on a credible site) or in a library or archive).

CRITIQUES:

Those students not presenting an article and submitting an essay on a given week will be required to do the assigned readings, participate in the seminar discussion, and write an essay critique. Select three student essays
(which will be accessible on OWL) on which you would like to write a critique. Your critique is due in class and must be submitted no later than one week following the submission of the essay about which it is written.

Submitted critiques will not be seen by anyone other than me; they will be returned with a mark as soon as possible. Critiques should be two typed pages and double-spaced. They should include a concise thesis statement stating the strengths and weaknesses of the essay; they should then discuss those strengths and weaknesses. They should also have an introduction and conclusion, but they do not require extra research or citations. When submitting your critique, please indicate if it is critique 1, 2, or 3.

Course Materials:

The required readings include all of the online articles cited below (most of the articles are on JSTOR and can be accessed by using your Western credentials; the other articles are also accessible for free).

The featured textbook is Joan Sangster’s Through Feminist Eyes: Essays on Canadian Women’s History. Edmonton: Athabasca University Press, 2011. The book is available for purchase through the university bookstore; selected chapters are also accessible online (as indicated below). Students can order the required book through the Book Store’s website and the book can be shipped directly to them, or students can pick up the book in-store.

There is also an e-text version, but it is not available through the Book Store’s online platform. Attached is a link where students can go to purchase this e-text version if they prefer.
