Slavery has existed in one form or another since time immemorial and, indeed, it continues in the present day. However, the slavery that developed in the early modern Atlantic world differed qualitatively and quantitatively from that which had preceded it. When it reached its apogee in the mid-18C, this racially-based system was conducted by virtually every country in Western Europe and on an unprecedented scale. As a consequence some have argued that the enslavement of African men, women and children underwrote much of the economic development of Western Europe and the Americas, constituting in itself a large scale industry with an extensive infrastructure. At this same point, however, opposition to the slave trade emerged from a number of quarters. European and American efforts to end, first the slave trade and then slavery itself, mobilized humanitarian and religious sentiment on a similarly unprecedented scale. Within a relatively short span of time, this extensive economic system had been outlawed in most of the developed world. Through readings and discussion, this course explores the rise of modern slavery, the structures and impact of the Trans-Atlantic Slave Trade (TAST), the experience of enslavement, the relationship between bound labour and plantation agriculture, the emergence of abolitionist/antislavery activism and the process of Emancipation across the Atlantic world.

Objectives: Students taking this course will:
1. Examine the origins and evolution of the Trans-Atlantic Slave Trade (TAST) and the interconnections among Europe, Africa, North and South America and the Caribbean in the TAST.
2. Compare and contrast the various slave societies that emerged in the Atlantic world between 1500 and 1800.
3. Examine the social and psychological impact of the experience of enslavement.
4. Examine the dynamics of race in the TAST.
5. Analyze the origins and evolution of opposition to the TAST and to slavery itself.
6. Summarize and describe the processes by which slavery ended in various regions of the Americas.
7. Assess the experience and consequences of Emancipation for persons enslaved in various regions of the Americas and the Caribbean.
8. Develop/enhance their skills in the interpretation of primary sources.
9. Develop/enhance their historiographical skills, by analyzing, integrating and synthesizing a particular body of historical research relating to slavery and abolition.

10. Develop/enhance their skills in oral and written communication.

Required Texts:

PLUS: a selection of additional readings (articles, etc.). Most of these are available online through Western Libraries. Where this is not the case, the article will be available on the course website and this will be indicated on the syllabus.

Assignments:

Class Presentations:

Each week in the first term beginning 25 September, groups of students will make brief (Not more than 10 minutes – students who exceed this limit will be penalized.) presentations in class describing the evolution of slavery in one (1) of the following locations: Barbados, Brazil, Cuba, Guadeloupe & Martinique, Jamaica, Mexico, New France, Puerto Rico, Saint Domingue (i.e. Haiti), Spanish South America (i.e. Columbia, Ecuador, Peru and Chile), and St. Vincent.

These presentations should address the following questions for the specific location under discussion: When, how and why was slavery introduced in this locale? What were the chief sources of enslaved peoples for this location, if known? What did enslaved peoples produce in this place? What was the demographic profile of enslaved peoples in this place? What were the institutional supports for slavery, (i.e. legal, religious, or political structures) in this place? Is there evidence of slave resistance in this location? What were the distinguishing characteristics of slavery in this location? Who owned slaves and how widely was slave ownership distributed in this locale? What impact did the geopolitical conflicts of our period (i.e. 1500-1900) have on slavery in this place? How and when did slavery end in this location? Not all these questions will be answerable for every location, but successful presentations will make an effort to describe the salient features of slavery and the experience of enslaved persons in the place under discussion. Students must submit a bibliography on their topic on the day of their presentation.

This assignment will be evaluated by the instructor (60% of the grade -- 6/10 marks) for the content and bibliography, and the effectiveness and quality of the presentation; and by the partners in the assignment (40% of the grade – 4/10 marks) for contribution and collaboration by their peer in the research and preparation of the presentation. This assignment will be discussed in class on Wednesday, 11 September 2013 and the selection of locations will be made in class the following week.
Historiography Essay:

Due Wednesday, 13 November 2013. Students will select one (1) topic from an assigned list, each topic will list four articles/extracts on a particular historical debate. Students will be expected to find one or two further articles/extracts on this topic. Working from these five/six articles/extracts students will write a 1000 word historiographical essay on this topic. In this essay, students will be expected to state the historical problem and present the different positions taken by the various authors, taking into account such factors as ideological orientation of the authors, evidence on which a given author draws, political contexts in which the article/extract was written and so forth. By these means the student will outline the way in which scholarship on the topic in question has evolved. The essay should conclude with a discussion of the current state of understanding on this topic and suggestions for aspects of the question that remain unexplored.

Further details and guidelines for this assignment will be discussed in class on 6 November 2013 and can be found on the course website.

Research Essay:

Students will write a research essay of 15-20 pages. In preparation for this assignment students will submit a 1-2 page essay proposal, plus a tentative bibliography on Wednesday, 8 January 2014. The essay proposal must include a statement of the question the essay will explore, should discuss briefly the work of two or three historians who have previously investigated this or related topics and should identify the primary sources on which the student intends to draw for her/his own research.

Further details and guidelines for this assignment will be discussed in class on 4 December 2013 and can be found on the course website.

On Wednesday, 5 February 2014, students will bring THREE (3) copies of a first draft of the paper to class. This first draft should be a minimum of 10-12 pages long and should be written in complete sentences, with standard paragraphing and foot/endnotes. Any student who fails to comply with this requirement should expect to forfeit a substantial portion of his/her participation mark for this term.

On Wednesday, 12 February 2014, these first drafts will be discussed in class. The final version of the essay is to be submitted both to Turnitin.com and in hard copy on Wednesday, 12 March 2014.

Please note: A late penalty of 2% of the value of each assignment per day will be levied on all assignments submitted after their respective deadlines.

Students seeking ACADEMIC ACCOMMODATION on medical or compassionate grounds should consult the following website:

PLAGIARISM

Students must write their essays and assignments in their own words. Whenever students take an idea, or a passage from another author, they must acknowledge their debt both by using quotation marks where appropriate and by proper referencing such as footnotes or citations. Plagiarism is a major academic offense (see Scholastic Offence Policy in the Western Academic Calendar).

All required papers may be subject to submission for textual similarity review to the commercial plagiarism detection software under license to the University for the detection of plagiarism. All papers submitted will be included as source documents in the reference database for the purpose of detecting plagiarism of papers subsequently submitted to the system. Use of the service is subject to the licensing agreement, currently between The University of Western Ontario and Turnitin.com (http://www.turnitin.com).

The following rules pertain to the acknowledgements necessary in academic papers.

A. In using another writer's words, you must both place the words in quotation marks and acknowledge that the words are those of another writer.

You are plagiarizing if you use a sequence of words, a sentence or a paragraph taken from other writers without acknowledging them to be theirs. Acknowledgement is indicated either by (1) mentioning the author and work from which the words are borrowed in the text of your paper; or by (2) placing a footnote number at the end of the quotation in your text, and including a correspondingly numbered footnote at the bottom of the page (or in a separate reference section at the end of your essay). This footnote should indicate author, title of the work, place and date of Publication and page number. Method (2) given above is usually preferable for academic essays because it provides the reader with more information about your sources and leaves your text uncluttered with parenthetical and tangential references. In either case words taken from another author must be enclosed in quotation marks or set off from your text by single spacing and indentation in such a way that they cannot be mistaken for your own words. Note that you cannot avoid indicating quotation simply by changing a word or phrase in a sentence or paragraph which is not your own.

B. In adopting other writer's ideas, you must acknowledge that they are theirs.

You are plagiarizing if you adopt, summarize, or paraphrase other writers' trains of argument, ideas or sequences of ideas without acknowledging their authorship according to the method of acknowledgement given in 'At above. Since the words are your own, they need not be enclosed in quotation marks. Be certain, however, that the words you use are entirely your own; where you must use words or phrases from your source; these should be enclosed in quotation marks, as in 'A' above.

Clearly, it is possible for you to formulate arguments or ideas independently of another writer who has expounded the same ideas, and whom you have not read. Where you got your ideas is the important consideration here. Do not be afraid to present an argument or idea without acknowledgement to another writer, if you have arrived at it entirely independently. Acknowledge it if you have derived it from a source outside your own thinking on the subject.

In short, use of acknowledgements and, when necessary, quotation marks is necessary to distinguish clearly between what is yours and what is not. Since the rules have been explained to you, if you fail to make this distinction, your instructor very likely will do so for you, and they will be forced to regard your omission as intentional literary theft. Plagiarism is a serious offence which may result in a student's receiving an 'F' in a course or, in extreme cases, in their suspension from the University.

MEDICAL ACCOMMODATION

The University recognizes that a student’s ability to meet his/her academic responsibilities may, on occasion, be impaired by medical illness. Please go to https://studentservices.uwo.ca/secure/medical_accommodations_link_for_OOR.pdf to read about the University’s policy on medical accommodation. Please go to http://www.uwo.ca/univsec/handbook/appeals/medicalform.pdf to download the necessary form. In the event of illness, you should contact Academic Counselling as soon as possible. The Academic Counsellors will determine, in consultation with the student, whether or not accommodation is warranted. They will subsequently contact the instructors in the relevant courses about the accommodation. Once a decision has been made about accommodation, the student should contact his/her instructors to determine a new due date for term tests, assignments, and exams.

If you have any further questions or concerns please contact, Rebecca Dashford, Undergraduate Program Advisor, Department of History, 519-661-2111 x84962 or rdashfo@uwo.ca
