Course Description:
This course provides an examination of selected aspects of the First World War, including its origins and aftermath, in a variety of combatant nations. Among the themes to be discussed are the causes of the war, the experience of battle, conflicts on the home front, war culture, social factors, strategic and tactical decision-making, and the memory of the war. Students will have an opportunity to debate the most contentious historiographical issues surrounding the war and use a wide range of primary sources, both in discussions and assignments.

Antirequisite(s):
History 4709E.

Course Syllabus:
By the end of this course, students should be able to:

- show familiarity with accurate factual information about a wide range of people, groups, events, and documents relating to the First World War, and understand their significance;
- demonstrate superior oral and written communication skills;
- analyze secondary sources, including their documentary basis, methods, arguments, strengths, limitations, implications, and significance for the field;
- spell your name with semaphore flags;
- appreciate and understand the nature of the First World War in the context of its own time;
- grasp the ongoing impact of the First World War in various societies and in various ways.

Course Materials:
Students should secure the following texts, which will be used throughout the year:

Hew Strachan, The Oxford Illustrated History of the First World War (any edition)

Additional readings are available on the course website.
Methods of Evaluation:
Students must submit all coursework. Failure to submit all assigned coursework will result in a failing grade.

Assignments:
- Poetry analysis: 20%
- Public history exercise: 25%
- Postcard analysis: 35%
- Seminar presentation and participation: 20%

Poetry analysis – due 10 October
Students will write a short analysis, roughly 500 words in length, of a poem from George Walter’s The Penguin Book of First World War Poetry (you may not write about a poem that appears on the syllabus for the first four weeks of the course). It should not be a literary analysis, but rather should focus on the poem as an historical document, discussing the author and the context of the work and identifying any terms or proper names that are significant. Although some research beyond the course materials may be required, the assignment is intended to evaluate your writing skills – grading will be based primarily on the clarity of expression. A sample poetry analysis can be found on the course website.

Public history exercise – due 7 November
For this assignment, you have two options:
1) Research (using secondary sources) and write the text for an historic plaque to be erected on a site connected with the First World War. It should be directed at the general public, the passer-by who has little or no prior knowledge of the war. Your plaque text can be no more than 60 words in length. You should also submit a bibliography and a brief statement (roughly 500 words) that provides the rationale for the location of your plaque.
2) In a group of up to four people, create a display on some aspect of the First World War, for one of the History Department’s cabinets. Once the subject has been chosen, each person in the group will be responsible for selecting one artifact or image display, and researching and writing an explanatory text (no more than 60 words in length) to accompany it. You should also submit a bibliography and a brief statement (roughly 500 words) outlining the factors that went into your choice of an object to display.

Postcard analysis – due 5 December
You will be given an original postcard from the First World War to research and analyze. You should approach it as an exercise in historical detection – how much can the postcard tell you about the time, and about the people and events to which it refers? Your analysis should be at least ten pages in length. Because of the nature of the assignment, it does not need a thesis statement, like a conventional research paper, nor does it need to be presented in prose paragraphs – point form or bulleted sections is acceptable. It should include reference notes and a bibliography. The evaluation will be based largely on the depth and quality of the research – asking the right questions rather than getting all of the answers. A sample analysis can be found on the course website.

 Note: Any late assignment will be subject to a deduction of two marks per day (including weekend days). Assignments submitted more than seven days after the due date will not be graded.
Seminar presentation and participation
The success of the seminar depends on the willingness of students to keep up with the readings on a weekly basis and to take part fully in the discussion. Your participation will be assessed on an ongoing basis throughout the term. Each student will be required to prepare a brief oral presentation (of no more than 10 minutes – time limits will be enforced) on an aspect of that week’s readings (the specific question to be addressed will be given to you two weeks before your presentation). A schedule of presentations is posted on OWL in the Wiki tab. You should sign up early to secure the subject of your choice.

All work submitted in this course must be your own. You may not make use of generative AI tools like ChatGPT for any assignments in this course.

Make-up tests, midterms, and exams can only be approved by Academic Counselling. Please see https://history.uwo.ca/undergraduate/program_module_information/policies.html for department procedures and requirements involving make-up tests and exams.
